The huge snake that had been lending a precarious existence at the Suma Garden, Kobe, during the last three years—a captive in a different climate from that in which it was born—recently died, unable to bear the rigors of the winter. Although the reptile was a magnificent species, as it measured 25 feet in length and 28 inches around the thickest part, it never made itself unpleasantly obtrusive, says Tokyo Chronicle. It was interred in the pine groves at the rear of the Kagetsu restaurant. Someone made the discovery on looking at an almanac that the day on which the reptile died was a day of the snake, and remembered an old superstition that toothache may be cured by worshipping a snake. The grave of the Suma snake consequently began to be visited by the superstitious, who proclaimed to the world the supernatural means of healing toothache by worshipping there. The report has since traveled far and wide and scores of people are visiting the grave every day, bringing some gain to the Hyogo tramway owners, who need no faith to be assured of the benefits accruing from the virtues of the departed snake. Some of the people whose toothache has been cured by the spirit of the snake have decided to build a shrine on the ground where the reptile was buried. The place has already been fenced in and a sign erected preparatory to the commencement of work.

The shutting off of the drug supply from Europe has aroused interest here in the cultivation of plants for medicinal use. Some of these can be raised with little trouble, and a number of them are already grown for floral or ornamental purposes. Others are found in their wild state and may be made to yield a fair profit with a reasonable amount of care. Calomus or sweet flag is a native wild plant used as a drug. It may be started from the old roots which are apt to be found along the banks of streams or the edge of swamps. Tons of the dried roots of this plant are imported every year. Yet a single acre in this country can be made to yield at least 1,500 pounds with an average value of four or five cents a pound. Thousands of pounds of coriander seed are also imported each year. The returns from the government experiment farms indicate that this seed can be grown in America at an average yield of 1,000 pounds to the acre and a market price of six and one-half cents. Old-fashioned herbs, such as peppermint, catnip, horehound, lobelia and boneset grow wild, but can be improved by slight cultivation, and are sure of a certain demand while the cultivation of lavender, especially in the southwestern states, is fast becoming of commercial importance.

One of the factors that are considered by the trained investors in farm mortgages is the stability of the population, says Financial World. The section where there has been a sudden influx of settlement may show great land value boom, but there is also a possibility that there will be a quick depreciation as the population moves out after finding that the conditions are not what they expected. The country that shows steady population figures is favored by the insurance companies for the reason that the lands are surer to earn the interest.

In our pessimistic moments it seems to us that the average man is so engrossed and delighted with the task of ministering to his stomach that he generally insists on his soul and spirit feeding at the second table when nothing but the necks, drumsticks and backs remain.

If a man develops into a good-natured pack-mule, he will have to work, but the family and the servants will respect him, though they will never entwine garlands around his neck until he's dead.

The efficiency experts are finding that many office employees work under depressing conditions, the trouble being particularly bad afternoons when the team plays at home.

What the people want is often hard to discern, for the people don't know themselves what it is they want until they have voted and found out.

JOHN DEWAR, the well known Master Painter of Pittsburgh, before the Pennsylvania State Convention, said the cost of paint used on a building represents 20 to 30 percent of the cost of doing the work, and the labor 70 to 80 percent. The point I wish to convey and "sink in" is can we afford to buy and use material of any uncertain quality. The very best is sometimes not too good, when we consider the value of personal reputation.

The difference between the cost of good and indifferent materials being but from 5 to 15 per cent. In this connection I wish to say I have found the manufacturer of good goods makes an effort to sell as close as possible, consistent with his class of goods, while the dope maker strives to get all he possibly can, irrespective of his class of goods, just keeping sufficiently under the market to make the price enticing to the unwary.

By using the Lowe Bros. High Standard Paints and Varnishes, you get the best that man can make.

Renewing Rubber.

Rubber that has lost its elasticity may be rejuvenated, according to the Journal de Pharmacie et de Chimie, by immersing it for five minutes in a bath of glycerin mixed with 25 times its volume of distilled water and heated to 70 degrees Centigrade and then drying it with filter paper.

PLAIN QUESTIONS TO PERRYBURG PEOPLE

Every Perryburg Reader Will Admit the Soundness of the logic.

Would Perryburg people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as they do if the medicine were not reliable? Would they confirm their statements after years have elapsed if their experience did not show the remedy to be deserving of it? Statements like the following must carry conviction to the mind of every reader:

Chas. Bayer, harness maker, Main St., Perryburg, says: I had a case of kidney weakness. The spells of the trouble were frequent enough to cause considerable annoyance. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and was convinced that they are all they are claimed to be."

Later Testimony.

MORE THAN FIVE YEARS LATER Mr. Bayer said: "I am always ready to praise Doan's Kidney Pills. I haven't had to use them since I gave my last recommendation. They cured me."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Bayer has twice publicly recommended. Foster Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

MORE FARM MACHINERY RUSTS OUT THAN IS WORN OUT

Doesn't that conclusively prove the profitableness of having suitable sheds for all your farm implements?

What would you say to your wife, Mr. Farmer, if she were to leave her $50.00 sewing machine out in the yard over night in a rain storm? You would say something, all right, if she persisted in leaving it out in the weather, and it wouldn't sound very complimentary, either.

Well, how about the shoe being on the other foot with those costly tools rusting out there in the barn yard and fields for lack of proper shelter?

You might look in the mirror yourself.

It has been estimated that providing shelter for farm machinery would return 30 per cent on the money invested in the necessary building, and when you can buy Shed Lumber as cheap as we are selling it right now, there's no excuse for your high priced farm machinery rusting out before it wears out.

Drop in and see us about it. Maybe we can help you out, and what better time to fix things than now?
